The Academic Procession and Regalia

The pageantry and dress of the academic procession have been inherited from the medieval universities of the eleventh and twelfth centuries where academic life began, first in church then in guilds. The teaching guild was the guild of the Master of Arts. The Bachelor was the apprentice of the Master, and the dress was the outward sign of privilege and responsibility.

Principal features of academic dress are the gown, the cap and the hood. Early in its evolution, it became necessary for universities to set rules to preserve the dignity and meaning of the academic dress. Two English universities, Oxford and Cambridge, are particularly noted for the development of the authentic academic costume, which through the centuries has changed only slightly.

Formal academic attire for American campuses was established in 1895 with the adoption of the Intercollegiate Code, which prescribed the patterns, colors and materials for each part of the regalia for the bachelor's, master's and doctoral levels. The American Council of Education presented a revised code which generally governs the style of academic dress today.

The Gown

The flowing gown comes from the twelfth century. While it originally may have been worn as protection against the chill of unheated buildings, today it has become symbolic of the democracy of scholarship, for it covers any dress of rank or social standing underneath. Gowns vary in the trimming and the sleeve design. The doctoral gown has velvet facings down the front and three velvet chevrons on the bell-shaped sleeves. These velvet trimmings may be black or the prescribed color of the academic area. The master's gown has oblong sleeves, open at the wrist, while the bachelor's gown has long pointed sleeves. Neither has trimming. The bachelor's gown is always worn closed; master's and doctoral gowns may be worn open or closed.

The royal blue honor cords represent members of the Golden Key National Honor Society.

The Cap

When Roman law freed the slave, he won the privilege of wearing a cap. The academic cap is a sign of freedom of scholarship as well as responsibility and dignity. Old poetry records the cap of scholarship as square to symbolize the book. The color of the tassel denotes the discipline. The square black mortarboard is the recommended cap, though some schools have adopted other styles. Doctors may wear a velvet cap with a gold tassel.

The Hood

The hood identifies the level of the degree, the school that granted it, and the academic area. The silk lining of the hood is the color or colors of the school. The color of the facing denotes the discipline represented by the degree. Some of the colors you may see represented today are:

Architecture - Blue Violet	Journalism - Crimson
Arts - White	Law - Purple
Business - Sapphire Blue	Medicine - Green
Dentistry - Lilac	Music - Pink
Education - Light Blue	Nursing - Apricot
Engineering - Orange	Pharmacy - Olive
Environmental Design - Brown	Public Affairs - Peacock Blue
Fine Arts - Brown	Science - Gold
